DESCRIPTION

Background	TCTP/TPT1, a multifaceted protein, assumes a crucial role in diverse cellular processes. It engages in calcium binding and contributes to microtubule stabilization, indicating its significance in maintaining cellular structure and function. Moreover, TCTP/TPT1 acts as a negative regulator of TSC22D1-mediated apoptosis by interacting with and destabilizing the TSC22D1 protein. The protein forms homodimers and interacts with STEAP3, suggesting its involvement in various protein-protein interactions that orchestrate cellular pathways. The interaction with TSC22D1 highlights its role in modulating apoptotic processes, emphasizing the multifunctional nature of TCTP/TPT1 in cellular homeostasis.
